

Bio:

Dany Doueiri was born in the Congo, raised in Lebanon and pursued his college education in the United States. He completed his Doctorate Degree in the interdisciplinary Islamic studies program at the University of California, Los Angeles. Doueiri joined the Department of World Languages & Literatures at the California State University, San Bernardino in 2001 and currently serves as the Arabic language program coordinator and an executive board member of the Center for Islamic and Middle Eastern Studies. In addition to teaching language and literature classes, he also teaches classes on the people, cultures, history, and politics of the Middle East. He is active in several educational and non-profit organizations and consults under multiple capacities for teacher training, language program evaluation, interfaith relationships, and human rights. Doueiri is the recipient of numerous awards for outstanding faculty, leadership, and community service. Before joining the academic life, he worked as a senior policy analyst consulting for major international organizations. He also co-founded Human Assistance and Development International, a U.S. based non-profit educational and scientific organization carrying development projects in the U.S. and around the world.