

Janine A. King has been in the field of education for more than twenty years, focusing primarily on adolescent literacy. In addition to teaching middle school language arts, she has taught literacy classes for Seattle University, has presented both nationally and internationally on topics of adolescent literacy, and has co-authored a book, Literature Circles in Middle School: One Teacher's Journey, with Bonnie Campbell Hill and Katherine Schlick Noe which chronicles her use of Literature Circles as part of a balanced reading curriculum in her middle school classroom. Currently she is a middle school literacy coach for Seattle Public Schools where she works with middle school teachers in the development and delivery of their literacy curriculum and instruction. She also works as an adolescent literacy consultant establishing balanced literacy programs in middle schools in Singapore, Dubai and Mumbai.